The reliable label Perplex consequently continues to idealize its style without letting the assumption occur to permanently try to top itself. With Joachim & Philogresz a.k.a. "Concolor" from Rotterdam, Perplex is getting another fresh and impressive act on board to supply an incredibly original track. The remixer needs no big introduction: Jerome Sydenham, Ibadan-labelmanager, ex-New-York and now Berlin-resident has been a living legend since the early 90ies. This combination makes Perplex #6 another double-a-side which does not only aim for the dancefloor but also gives a sweet musical foretaste of the coming summer.

"This Used To Be Our Playground" is a musically colourful hymn which seems custom-tailored for Perplex. It amazes by an individual composition of fine-dosed synthetic and warm analogue elements shaped with the finest sound-generators. This track should not be misunderstood as a track for the supposed "special moment", but should be carefully used in order to create such a moment at any time wanted!

Jerome Sydenham applies his version with such a straight intensity that it appears abysmally deep even despite its short breaks. A dynamic techno-bullet stripped down to the basics! The kicking drumloops with sickle-sharp hihats and whipping snares hold the tension from the beginning to the very end. Jerome Sydenham who has always been a great inspiration for Perplex-manager Charles Widmore, completes Perplex' sixth release not economically but spiritually!
